What it feels like to watch this artwork? It makes you feel like you are in a different world lost in the cloud of colors. I think both made the visuals because one got data and got a concept. The other got to generate the art work with the prompt it was given that it made with it too when it was thinking of the type of art to make. I think it affects my interpretation by the Ai not generating it well as humans leading to me or others not understanding what it means, why it was created, or concept behind it. Many reasons why AI fails at art is because its not as good at describing the meanings of the art compared to a human. They seem very empty even though colorful because its not made with a real human feeling. It was made with a soulless ai. The colors around it feel like the are combinding with each other. They are like clouds forming into different shapes. The clouds feel like they passed by you. The visuals of it look like other artwork by having similar colors to them of that landscape art by having orange, yellow, and red. The cloud like structure with many of the colors. “Artificial intelligence is neither artificial nor intelligent; it is made from human choices, data, and histories” (Crawford 8). This means that many of the Ai art is not independent and it comes from someone but also is soulless.
